

CHINESE TROOPS LAUNCH TERRIFIC COUNTER-ATTACK

In Effort to Arrest Strategic Woosung Force From Nipponese

CRUISERS ARE STRUCK

Three British Vessels Struck
By Shrapnel On The Whangpoo River

By M. C. Ford
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 1.—Undaunted by sweeping Japanese troops at Estuary on the Yangtze River, re-inforced Chinese troops today launched a terrific counter-attack in an effort to arrest the strategic Woosung force from Nipponese hands.

The heaviest charge of fire by the opposing forces was along the Whangpoo River from Woosung to Shanghai, which caught three British vessels. The cruiser Danae, the sloop Falmouth and the British-owned cargo steamer Shenking were struck by shrapnel during the fighting which was saturated by aerial raids from both sides. The decks of all three ships were scarred and dented, but there were no casualties. Just prior to the Chinese counter offensive, the Japanese solidified their position in the upper region of the Whangpoo by taking Paoshan, a few miles north of Woosung, and launched an army drive against concentration around Shanghai in the vicinity of Tientsin.

Extent of the bloody fighting which preceded the fall of Woosung was told by Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, the so-called "Christian General," a powerful war lord whose troops are opposing the Nationalist cause.

LATEST NEWS ---- Received by International News Service Leased Wires.

Add To Executed List

Moscow, Sept. 1.—Firing squads today added seven to the growing list of leaders executed for conspiracy against the Stalin regime.
Seven of the 11 officials tried for counter-revolutionary activities were executed immediately following their conviction. Two were sentenced to 10 years in prison and two others to eight years.

Pilot Narrowly Escapes Death

New York, Sept. 1.—Alexander Desversky narrowly escaped death today when his sleek silver racing monoplane ground-looped at Floyd Bennett Field and then burst into flames. The noted plane builder leaped clear and was unharmed. The fire was put out with hand extinguishers. The only damage to the plane was a bent propeller.

3 Cruisers Leave for China

Los Angeles, Sept. 1.—Three of the United States Navy heavy cruisers at Los Angeles will leave today under secret orders to sail for China.

High officials refused to discuss the loading of the Quincy, San Francisco and Tuscaloosa with naval storage and other supplies.

Fear Black Plague

Washington, Sept. 1.—Cholera, the dead black plague of the Middle Ages, added to the daily fear of aerial bombing today, impelled the United States government to concentrate seriously on evacuation of the American civilians from Shanghai. Outbreak of the Asiatic disease from which few victims recover, struck terror to the residents of the war-torn Chinese metropolis.

Speculate On Conference

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 1.—A luncheon conference here today between President Roosevelt and Robert W. Bingham, American Ambassador to London, aroused speculation.

The President said Bingham, who reported to Secretary of State Hull in Washington on "world conditions" in general was visiting Hyde Park socially.

In view of the problem confronting the United States and England as a result of most recent developments in the undeclared war between Japan and China, observers wait to see whether the President and his ambassador might, at least, discuss such matters.

COUNTY POULTRYMEN TO VISIT LEHIGH COUNTY

Will Make Annual Tour In Neighboring County
Today

MEET AT COOPERSBURG

County Agent William F. Greenawalt had charge of plans for the annual Bucks County Poultry Tour being held today when a tour through Lehigh county will be made.

The group will assemble at 9.30 o'clock, D. S. T., at Coopersburg, on Route 309.

The tour will include visits to the poultry plants of L. J. Bender, Allentown, where 1200 Rhode Island Reds will be seen; Rinker Poultry Farm, Catasauqua, with 3,000 Leghorns; Joe Suppan's farm at Catasauqua, with 3,000 Leghorns and New Hampshire chickens, and the Trexler Poultry Farms at Trexlerstown.

There will be a basket lunch.

John B. Tomlinson was awarded the contract to transport pupils from the closed schools in the lower part of Solebury township to other sections in the district. He is to receive $160 per month for his services.

During the special meeting of the board last week the directors discussed the bus proposition and arranged a plan for Mr. Tomlinson to transport the pupils.

Mr. Tomlinson had arranged to purchase a bus in New Jersey, but it was found that it will not be acceptable in this State. The vehicle was to have had a capacity for 51 children. It was stated, however, that all arrangements for the transportation of the pupils will be completed before the opening of the schools on September 7th.

Joseph H. Munzer, 39, 2658 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, who was arrested by Trooper George H. Rentz, of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor on the Pebble Hill Road about 10 o'clock Friday evening, was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack and held in $500 bail for court.

Americans Aid in Mercy Work

Note the wounded Chinese soldier strapped to the fender of the car above. He is one of several waiting for admission into Peiping at the Yuan Ting Men Gate to the ancient capital, and was brought there from the war-scarred suburb of Nanyuan by Bonnie Powell, famous American movie cameraman. Powell, standing behind the flag, took pictures of the fighting at Nanyuan, where some of the bitterest warfare was waged in defense of Peiping, and where thousands of Chinese died.

173 CAMPERS REGISTER AT FRIENDS' CAMP ONAS

95 Girls During Four Weeks'
Period; and 78 Boys for Three Weeks

FROM A WIDE AREA

NEWTOWN, Sept. 1.—With a total of 173 campers at the seven-weeks' session, Camp Onas, near Rushland, the Bucks County First Day School camping season has closed. The number of girls enrolled during the four weeks was 95, and the total of boys was 78. The girls were camped for four weeks and the boys for three.

A partial list of those enjoying camp life at Camp Onas follows:

William Errico, Walter S. Farley, Bobby Kenderline, Marise, Adele and Barbara Kenderline, Jane, John and Betty Bond, Alice Kester, Carolyn Leedom, Edgar T. and Vincent K. Shandys, J. Steward Scott, Eugenia and Kendall Tomlinson, Edith Price, Marian Balderston, Betsy and Rebecca Eves, Kenneth, Malcolm and Philip Swayne and John Price.

Others from Trenton and vicinity were Jean Eleanor Clark, 215 Hollywood Drive, Trenton; G. Thomas Brooks, Jr., 165 Lee avenue, Trenton; Fletcher and Brooks Cooper, 132 Columbia avenue, Trenton; David Gerard, 27 North Dean avenue, Trenton; Billy and Donald McCandless, State Hospital, Trenton; Jean E. Burroughs, 1331 Hamilton avenue, Trenton; Grace F. Helsel, 6 Francis avenue, Trenton; Jack and Ted Wright, 107 Lee avenue, Trenton; Edward and Robert Thompson, Morrisville; Herbert Wright, Yardley; Ted Newlin Ely, Washington Crossing; Harry S. Hoffman, Jr., Yardley; Leigh Morrell, Washington Crossing; Bradshaw and Thomas Snipes, Morrisville; Anna Snipes, Alta Schultz, Alice Thorn and Barbara J. Watson, all of Morrisville; Laura Cadwallader and Elizabeth Cadwallader, Yardley; Elaine Simpson and Wilson Joyce, Morrisville, and Miriam Rowe, Woodside.

Mrs. Mabel R. Briggs, who lives between Yardley and Newtown, is camp director and through her unceasing efforts the camp has developed and added many facilities and conveniences from time to time. There are now six cabins most of which have double-decker beds, and three tents, besides a well-built and well-equipped main cabin which contains kitchen and a large all-purpose room with fireplace where campers eat, hold meetings and generally get together. Large porches afford extra space.

This Summer Mrs. Briggs was assisted by Miss Leah Gause, of Glen Moore, Pa., a former teacher at State College, and by the following councilors: Barbara Lewis, Riverton; Elizabeth Eberhard, Holland, Pa.; Elma Griscoom, Trenton; Florence Burton, Bristol; Alice Michener, New Hope; Elizabeth Cadwallader, Yardley, and Alice Roberts, Flemington. During the boys' weeks the assistant directors were James Townsend and Franklin Wood, of Langhorne, with the following councilors: Conrad Atkinson, Wrightstown, Pa.; Samuel Snipes, Morrisville; Charles Waugh, Newtown; Charles Frederick, Plymouth Meeting; Bevan Walton, New Hope, and Merle Pickett, Langhorne.

Malcolm Crooks, of Solebury, and Edward Atkinson, of Wrightstown, also assisted. Margaret Roberts, of Newtown, helped with the music in assembly periods a few mornings each week.

Besides nature work, swimming instruction and classes in Bible study, a number of interesting projects were worked out. The senior boys made a number of kayaks, worked in hammered brass and leather and the girls did weaving, made candlewick tufted pillows, leather and oilcloth articles.

ADD THREE MEMBERS TO FACULTY AT LANGHORNE

Name Those Who Will Take Up Duties When Fall
Term Opens

SCHOOL OPENS SEPT. 7TH

LANGHORNE, Sept. 1.—Three new members will be added to the faculty of the Langhorne-Middletown public schools when they open for the 1937-38 term on Tuesday, September 7th.

Miss Madeline Griffin, who has been teaching at Edgely School, will take over the first grade at Langhorne school, succeeding Miss Mary Leutz, who resigned to take a position at Woods School. Miss Ethel Federkel, who taught last year in the Union School, Hilltown Township, will take charge of the school at Edgely. Eugene Schneek, of Allentown, a graduate of Muhlenberg College, will fill the vacancy in the seventh and eighth grades due to the resignation of Miss Mina Borneman. The high school faculty remains unchanged.

In accordance with an act passed by the General Assembly in June, beginners who are, or will be six years old by February 1, will be admitted.

All children intent on registering for the reopening of school must present their vaccination and birth certificates on the first day.

A half-day session will prevail on the opening day. Grade school pupils will be registered, supplies issued and other details arranged in readiness for real work the following day. The high school pupils will register and complete schedule cards. Re-examinations will be conducted for those obliged to take Summer courses.

Included in the new equipment purchased for the next term is a ballopticon, a machine which throws on a screen images of post cards, pages of books and other material. Heretofore, the faculty has borrowed stereopticon and motion picture machines.

MOTOR TO VIRGINIA

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Townsend and children, Nan and Ned, Mansion street, and Leonard Herman, Wood street, have returned from a motor trip through Virginia, over the Sky Line drive to Charlottesville, Enroute they visited Luray Caverns.

Emslie Asay Dies; Will Be Buried On Thursday

A former resident of Bristol Township, Emslie Asay, who died Sunday in Strausstown, will be buried tomorrow in Beechwood Cemetery.

The late Mr. Asay resided at Midway until two years ago. He is survived by his father, Issachar Asay, and a sister, Mrs. Lewis Duerr, Strausstown. He was the son of the late Clara Asay.

The funeral, to which relatives and friends are invited, will be held tomorrow at 2.30 p. m., from the Molden funeral home, 542 Bath street. Friends may call this evening.

Shanghai Defender

Gen. Pai Chung-Hsi

Although once a bitter foe of Dictator Chiang Kai-Shek, Gen. Pai Chung-Hsi, one of the more able military strategists of China, has been placed in command of the 300,000 soldiers defending Shanghai, indicating that the Chinese leaders have reached a united front.

MOTORISTS SPEEDING UP TODAY UNDER NEW LAW

Chief Jones Cautions, However, "Not To Make Race-Courses Out of Streets"

LIMIT HERE IS NOW 25

Motorists in Pennsylvania today are "stepping on the gas" to the extent of 25 or 35 miles per hour in restricted zones where "official" signs are posted and 50 miles on the open highway, under a new law effective today.

Chief of Police Jones, however, says that just because the speed limit has been increased, is no reason for motorists to make race courses out of the streets of Bristol, and that this pertains especially to Radcliffe, Pond, Buckley, Bath and Beaver streets, where there are fewer intersections and motorists are prone to "hit-it-up."

"Drive with caution," is the admonition of Chief Jones. "Drive with common sense and care, so that the lives of others are not endangered," he says.

The "20-mile limit" signs posted along Pond street and Farragut avenue during the time that traffic was being diverted through here, while repairs were being made to the Lincoln Highway, are no longer effective and will have to be removed.

The old 40-mile maximum and the standard 20 m. p. h. in business and residence districts are discarded, the Keystone Automobile Club points out, "in favor of speeds which can be enforced."

"We are not advocates of high speed," said J. Maxwell Smith, general manager of the club, "but we certainly favor the reasonable speed regulations as embodied in the law effective this week. We venture to say that not a single operator in Pennsylvania felt any scruples about exceeding the 40-mile limit. In consequence of widespread disregard of the regulation, respect for this and other laws decreased. Victims of spasmodic 'enforcement campaigns' paid the penalty for being 'caught' in an offense that all motorists were committing."

"With the 50-mile-an-hour maximum, we believe motorists generally will keep within the speed limitation. There can be little or no excuse for drivers violating the law. We look for strict enforcement by the State Motor Police, and from the reaction we have received from members it is our opinion there will be far less 'speeding' under the 50-mile rule than there was under the old maximum. In other words we believe motorists will be satisfied with the reasonable limit and will do their utmost to observe it."

Mr. Smith pointed to the other important provisions in the law effective this week establishing 25 and 35 mile limits within business and residence districts where formerly the only alternative to the maximum of 40 was to impose the 20-mile limit, which, he said, was rarely enforced.

"Under the new law," he continued, "authorities are given the leeway essential to real control of traffic. In many places the 35-mile limit is reasonable and enforceable, whereas the 20-mile limit is neither. A standard 25-mile limit in sections where low speed is desirable will unquestionably be accorded more respect than the 20-mile limits."

ASK PRESIDENT TO RECALL NATIONALS FROM DANGER ZONE

Friends in Burlington and Bucks Quarterly Meeting
Take Action

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Message Asks That Executive Caution Marines Not To Become Embroiled

FALLSINGTON, Sept. 1.—A letter was ordered to be sent to President Roosevelt asking him to recall our nationals from the danger zone of China, when the Burlington and Bucks Quarterly Meeting of Friends occurred here, Saturday afternoon.

There were two sessions, one in the afternoon, and the second in the evening. The letter urged the chief executive to use his authority to enforce the Neutrality Act, in order that it may function in the present Sino-Japanese conflict.

The message also asked him to especially caution our Marines not to become embroiled in the alarming and destructive war maneuvers rampant in the Orient.

Three foreign delegates to the World Conference of Friends to be held at Swarthmore, Pa., from September 1 to 8, attended the meeting Saturday afternoon.

During the evening meeting one of these visitors told of the condition of Friends in Germany, and another of the Friends in Syria. In both countries Friends have been concerned to provide education for the eager youth of the land.

However, in order to give the privilege of untrammelled instruction to German youth, Friends have established their school in Holland. There, in a beautiful old castle over a hundred young people from Germany and Holland are receiving an education which prepares them to enter the universities of England.

Discountenance Story of Forced "Sale" in Bucks

RICHLANDTOWN, Sept. 1.—(INS)—Bucks County authorities today had refused to countenance Calvin Pfaf's forcing the "sale" of a farm house at the point of a gun.

Pfaf, a 55-year-old Bible student, was released in $500 bail on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, after he allegedly compelled David D. Graber of Richlandtown to sign a bill of sale for a farm property while he held a shot gun against him. The Graber farmhouse, police said, originally belonged to Pfaf, but he lost it by foreclosure in 1934. Pfaf sought to regain possession.

Surprise Yardley Man On Natal Anniversary

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1937

SEPTEMBER

Every month speaks its own language. It conveys thoughts to human life. September, with its invigorating air, says it is time for man to quit his languid ways and walk and labor with a spring in his step and his touch.

Still more, September is a month of fruition. Waving fields of grain, rich color of fruits, say the time has come to reap the reward of labor. The industrious gardener sees his bins filled with luscious fruits and vegetables.

Unfortunate farmers in the drought states have seen honest toil beaten by the pitiless sun and storms of dust. Yet as a whole September brings a ripe fruitage for those who have stressed and striven. It is a kind of object lesson that toil in the long run does not go unrewarded.

IT IS NOT COWARDICE

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, used the adjective "cowardly" in criticizing those who, he said, have urged withdrawal of the American forces protecting American citizens at Shanghai.

It always occurs to us when we hear brave talk like that to inquire how near the speaker himself may be to the danger. Senator Pittman was not on the deck of the Augusta when a stray anti-aircraft shell took the life of Seaman Faldout; it was not his flesh that was torn and mangled. He is roughly 10,000 miles from the fighting at Shanghai. And so are we.

So far as we can see there is no question of bravery or cowardice in what he says or in what we say about the wisdom of getting out of Shanghai.

The brave Senator chose to impute to others the suggestion that American forces be withdrawn forthwith, leaving American civilians unprotected. So far as we know, that suggestion has not been made by anybody.

What has been suggested is that American civilians be evacuated at once—as many as may be willing to go, the rest to be put on notice that protection no longer will be extended; that American sailors and marines no longer will be asked to expose themselves to gunfire in order to suit their convenience as to a time for leaving a blazing battle field.

What Senator Pittman probably has in mind is that American civilians must stay in Shanghai to look after American "interests." That means to look after their property, or rather, for the most part, the property of the corporations that employ them.

We for one are unwilling to be brave to the point of endangering young American lives for a bolt of dress goods or a tank of petroleum.

We are unwilling to protect American property in the midst of a battlefield at the risk of involving the United States in war.

If that is cowardice, it is cowardly to leave a burning building before the roof caves in, or—to make the analogy more accurate—it is brave to stand on the sidelines and order the firemen into the blaze.

"The Fims," a literary survey finds, "read more books than any other of the European peoples." And keep them accurately, too.

Burying the gold to protect it in war is wise; but can we operate those large munitions industries in Kentucky caves?

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

SYNOPSIS

During an afternoon party on the lawn of Major Forrest's place, Gerard Monteth, extremely wealthy man of 50, living on the adjoining estate, is murdered. Monteth wanted Mary, his niece, to marry Forrest's son, David, and said he would disinherit her if she refused. Mary is secretly in love with an artist, Howard Griswold. Forrest's son-in-law, Harlan Stevenson, writer of crime mysteries, is asked to help solve the mystery. He finds that Monteth was killed with a knife which was disguised as a silver rood. This was hanging on the wall in another room from where Monteth was found. Mary, it is learned, left the party for a half hour that afternoon. Griswold, ordered to keep away by Monteth, weeks before, was also on the grounds. Mary, however, swears he was not there. Jackson, the maid is questioned and catches her breath when asked if any stranger called.

CHAPTER VII

"Someone you recognized?" I asked, quickly.

"Yes sir, this afternoon. I came down to move the canary out of the hot sun at the end window; I had forgotten it at noon. I saw Morin going into the library."

We exchanged glances.

"What time?" Foxcroft demanded.

"Sometime after three o'clock, sir."

"Who is Morin?" I asked.

"The new up-stairs maid, sir."

"What did she say?"

"She didn't see me. I moved the bird and left."

They sent Morin in. She surprised me, there was so much dash and beauty about her. No one would ever have taken her for a maid.

"Did you go into the library porch this afternoon, Miss?" Harper asked in the soft voice he can use on occasion.

"Yes sir."

"What time?"

"After three. He was asleep in the hammock. I didn't disturb him."

"What did you want to see him about?"

She hesitated.

"A private matter," she finally said, sullenly.

"A private matter?"

Sergeant Harper's voice lost its velvet tone.

"A personal matter," the girl corrected him.

I noticed that she did not say "Sir" to every question, as did the other servants.

"What is your name?"

"Miss Morin."

"Your full name."

"Miss Nola Morin."

None of the others had added "Miss" when asked their name. I was sure, by this time, that the really handsome woman—she looked to be twenty-five—was no more a trained maid than I was.

"How long have you worked here?"

"Two weeks."

"Well, we have to know what that personal matter was," Harper barked at her.

"Why?"

She asked it coldly, almost insolently.

"Because Mr. Monteth didn't die a natural death!"

Nola Morin leaned toward Sergeant Harper, her eyes wide with amazement, or else she was a clever actress.

"He didn't what? Do you mean he was killed?"

"Murdered. Now what was your personal matter with him?"

"Try and find out. I mean—you see, it doesn't matter now, anyway. It's too late."

"You walked in there and killed him!"

Harper fairly bellowed this at her.

"You're crazy!" was her instant reply. She seemed to be quite composed, other than showing annoyance. Foxcroft whispered to Harper, who nodded and turned to me.

"Ask her about it, if you wish, Mr. Stevenson," he said.

"Miss Morin," I asked, as reassuringly as I could, "how long have you known Mr. Monteth?"

"So far as I know, I never set eyes on him until I came here two weeks ago."

"How did you happen to apply to him for the position?"

"I didn't apply. A friend of mine, knowing I needed work, had this job. She was going away—to be

"Did you see anyone—either a stranger or some of the servants, about when you went out to the porch and found Mr. Monteth sleeping?"

"Not in the house."

She was beginning to soften a little with me, to be less on guard.

Foxcroft and Harper both looked up quickly when she said that.

"Did you go out in the yard?"

"No, sir."

I felt a trifle flattered when she said "Sir" to me.

"Tell it in your own way, Miss Morin."

Nola Morin leaned toward Sergeant Harper, her eyes wide with amazement. "Do you mean he was killed?"

married—she got me to take her place."

"I see. You were glad to get the work?"

"Naturally."

"Who was the former maid?"

"A Miss Hutton."

"Whom did she marry and where is she now?"

"I don't know her boy friend, or where she's gone. She just happened to know me."

"I suppose you have had a lot of experience?"

"What do you mean, 'experience'?"

"As a maid."

"Not so much. I used to be on the stage, but I couldn't get much book-

"I cannot imagine," I said smiling at her insolently, "what sort of a personal matter an up-stairs maid could have with Mr. Monteth, on two weeks acquaintance. Had you talked with him often?"

"Only once. He passed me and said 'Good Morning' and I said 'Good Morning.' Look here, I might as well tell you—all I wanted was to get more money. I thought that if I asked him, directly, and smiled real nice at him, he might raise my salary."

"I see. Of course, Mrs. Johnson was the one to go to about that. Didn't you know it?"

"Not a chance. But I thought I might wheedle Mr. Monteth into giving me more money."

"How do you like it here?"

"Not any too well. These servants are snootier than the real people, I mean, like Mr. Monteth and Miss Monteth. They are real people. Breeding will show."

She smiled at me.

"I went through the library, expecting to find Mr. Monteth out on the porch, reading. Instead, he was in the hammock, out there, asleep."

"In the hammock?" Harper interrupted. He was using his soft voice again. "I mean, entirely in the hammock or partly fallen off of it?"

"All in the hammock, covered up and asleep." She turned to me.

"Of course I'd have been a fool to wake him up out of a nice sleep to ask for a raise. I decided to wait, and turned back."

"But you saw someone outside?"

"Oh yes, one of the gardeners, or the head gardener, I don't know which. He has a funny name. He only eats in the servants' dining room occasionally."

"Is the name Brauman?" Foxcroft asked.

"That's it. Yes sir."

Foxcroft wore doekin trousers, blue serge coat and sport shoes. I saw that it was probably his attire that won him the "Sir." I wondered how Foxcroft would know the name of the Monteth gardener.

"I suppose," Foxcroft said, "he was working out there?"

"He had a rake or something, but he was looking through the screen door when I stepped out on the porch. He turned and started to rake something. I didn't give him a second look."

"Thank you," I said and looked at Foxcroft and Harper.

"All right," Sergeant Harper said.

Miss Nola Morin departed.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD — Gypsy Rose Lee's mama is in town and the story is that mama also will accompany the former strip-tease queen and Robert Mizzy on a honey-moon trailer trip back to New York.

Anyway, Gypsy Rose, or Louise Hickok, as the movies would have her known, has bought a fancy, 29-foot trailer with an extra bedroom for mama and also a compartment for the actress' six dogs.

The Cantor picture, "All Baba Goes to Town," is winding up and Gypsy Rose then will be free to honeymoon and to revisit Broadway, the scene of her former triumphs.

One of the less publicized Hollywood romances—between Virginia Fields, Twentieth Century-Fox starlet, and Blake Owensmith—is now colder than cold, their friends say. He is reported heading for Chicago.

Lupe Velez is entertaining Sir Louis and Lady Greig and their son, the Honorable Charles Greig. The star threw a cocktail party in their honor, and, the other day, was working on the guest list.

"Why not ask the lady who always wants to be alone?" suggested the Honorable Charles, who is 14.

Lupe explained that Garbo does not attend cocktail parties.

The youngster frowned a minute, then brightened.

"Well then," he said, "why not ask the lady who never wants to be alone—the one who is always saying: 'Come up and see me sometime?'"

Harold Lloyd, Jr., now six, goes to school this year for the first time. After giving him a test, however, one of the better known private schools wants to start him in the second grade.

A couple of long established "movie guides," Harry Aldrich and Walter Sorrell, offer to take me on a trip through Beverly Hills and Bel Air and point out the homes of the stars without making a mistake. No doubt they can. Also some others. There are bound to be reliable men in the business, as well as phony ones. But the fact remains that a lot of tourists fall into less conscientious hands and are gyped.

Answering Your Questions! Sarah McIlheny, San Francisco! The last heard of Nils Asther, he was in Ceylon. On a postcard to a friend, he wrote: "Where I go from here, heaven only knows."

Don't know whether Warren William ever had the same boyhood ambition, but he's realized one of mine. He owns his own fire department. The M. G. M. star has the servants on his valley ranch regimented into fire-fighters—puts them through weekly drills. He has a central hose house, a chemical station and five fire-plugs on his property. His reserve water supply is his 50,000-gallon swimming pool. In case of fire he can hook a pump to a tractor and smother the blaze before it gets started.

Chatter. . . . A dog poisoner has just murdered the chow of Sidney Blackmer, who lives within two blocks of a police station. It was the usual trick, meat containing strychnine, tossed over the fence. One of these days, a dog poisoner is going to be caught. I wouldn't want to be in his place. In one district, where studio people are numerous, there are well laid plans for a tar and feather party. . . . Shirley Ross is mourning the loss of a $150 makeup case. It was stolen from her car while she stepped into a cleaner's shop. . . . Allan Jones rides to the studio in his dressing room. Yeah, a trailer. . . . Speaking of trailers, Hugh Herbert had to call the cops to oust a couple who had parked theirs in his plum orchard. . . . Michael Bartlett can pull his belt tighter these days. He's lost 10 pounds. . . . And Phil Ohman has composed a new song, "Speaking to You," which he has dedicated to Wendy Barrie. No romance, though. There's a Mrs. Phil Ohman, and it's a happy marriage.

THIS WEEK—150 YEARS AGO

The Story of the Constitutional Convention of 1787

BY RAYMOND PITCAIRN

THE IMPORTANT DETAILS

By the end of August, 1787, the Federal Convention that wrote our Constitution just a century and a half ago this summer, was approaching its successful close.

During the preceding fourteen weeks, delegates had been developing the broad design of the new government which was to loom so large in the history of human freedom. Now they were concerned with the tremendously important details of that plan.

Yet even in details, their leaders clung jealously to the principles of democracy which had influenced all the deliberations.

When, for example, on August 31, questions arose over methods of ratifying the National Charter in view of the fact that it might affect provisions in certain state constitutions, James Madison, of Virginia, quickly pointed out that these presented problems for the people to decide.

"The people," he said, "are, in fact, the fountain of all power," and added that by resorting to them all difficulties are solved.

Madison was equally insistent that in the proposed Union there should be no discrimination between states. Even states not yet organized, but which because of expanding population west of the Appalachians were expected later to seek admission, should enter, he insisted, on the same footing as those seaboard states represented at the Convention.

"The western states," he declared, "neither will nor ought to submit to a union which degrades them from an equal rank with the other states."

Many similarly significant details were ironed out during that busy week, and a large number of the conclusions then reached gave our Constitution its now familiar form. Among other decisions, the Convention agreed:

That "on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the States in the Union for an amendment of this Constitution, the Legislature of the United States shall call a Convention for that purpose."

That "members of the Legislature, and the Executive and Judicial Officers of the United States, and of the several States, shall be bound by oath to support this Constitution."

That "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the authority of the United States."

That the National Legislature should "lay and collect taxes to pay debts and provide for the common defence and welfare."

That Congress should be prohibited from imposing export duties. Notable also was this week of the Convention for the report on the office of President, submitted by a committee of which David Brearley, of New Jersey, was chairman.

It proposed that "no person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President, nor shall any person be elected to that office, who shall be under the age of thirty-five years, and who has not been, in the whole, at least fourteen years a resident within the United States."

For the first time in the deliberations of the Convention, the report suggested the office and duties of Vice-President. It recommended that the Vice-President should be ex-officio President of the Senate, and that he should not vote except when the Senate was equally divided.

Discussion on these proposals was reserved for later sessions. Next Week: Final Revisions.
